Trump’s secret weapon in Florida is a daughter of Cuban immigrants — and once blasted the president a con man

Published 2 mins ago on August 15, 2019

Florida’s first-ever Latina lieutenant governor has joined the Latinos for Trump effort in the president’s super PAC, but the effort involves strange bedfellows.

According to The Tampa Bay Times, Lt. Gov. Jeanette Nuñez once attacked Trump for being a “con man” during the 2016 presidential campaign.

Despite going on a full attack against Latinos, both legal and undocumented immigrants, it’s hard to see how the president thinks he will be able to capture such voters of color.

Exit polls show that Trump won 28 percent of the Latino vote in 2016, which was similar to 2012, when Mitt Romney got 27 percent. John McCain, by contrast, won 31 percent in 2008.

Meanwhile, a newly released poll by UnidosUS reveals that the president has lost ground with Latino voters. Only 13 percent say they “definitely” will vote for Trump in the 2020 election. Other numbers are just as dire, showing that including people who said that would “probably” vote for Trump in 2020, he’s still hovering around 21 percent.
